Gartner Peer Community...

Cybersecurity Mesh Architecture (CSMA)

operations and can help organizations cope with increasingly complex point solutions. What do IT and security leaders think of this emerging strategy so far?

The majority of respondents have an understanding of CSMA and foresee it

One-Minute Insights:

Over half of leaders are building CSMA at their org and among this group, most are satisfied with it becoming standard

Among those not currently building or planning to build CSMA, the majority feel they should be

Key factors driving adoption include the increasing complexity of both attack methods and security tools

CSMA being an emergent strategy presents major barriers to adoption such as the absence of tactical best practices and lack of vendors offering complete solutions

architecture works

5%

I'm an expert

How likely is it that CSMA of security operations?

n = 200

will become a standard part

Respondents: 200 IT and information security leaders Data collection: Nov 2, 2022 - Jan 16, 2023

One-Minute Insights on timely topics are available to Gartner Peer Community members. Sign up for access to over 100 more, and new insights each week.

Most leaders understand CSMA and believe it will likely become standard for security operations

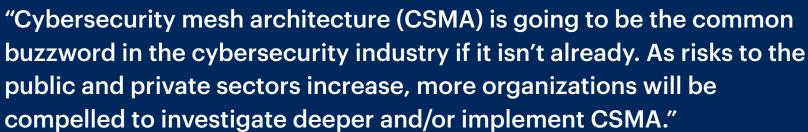

Over two-thirds (68%) of respondents understand how CSMA works but only 5% consider themselves to be experts on it.

mesh architecture (CSMA)? 68% I know how cybersecurity mesh

How informed are you about cybersecurity

23% Neutral 5% Moderately unlikely 1% Very unlikely 1% Not sure "The concept is a perfect evolution in cybersecurity and the adoption speed will depend on how quickly things solidify across the market (definition, standards, etc.)."

are building organization.

n = 200

Over half (53%) of leaders are building CSMA at their

The majority are satisfied with the CSMA their orgs

- Director, educational services industry, 5,000 - 10,000 employees

Is your organization currently building CSMA? 53% 35%

- Director, manufacturing industry, <1,000 employees

those building CSMA feel satisfied 10% with their organization's progress. Neither satisfied nor dissatisfied 61%

Moderately

satisfied

16% Too early to tell 12%

Very satisfied

Yes

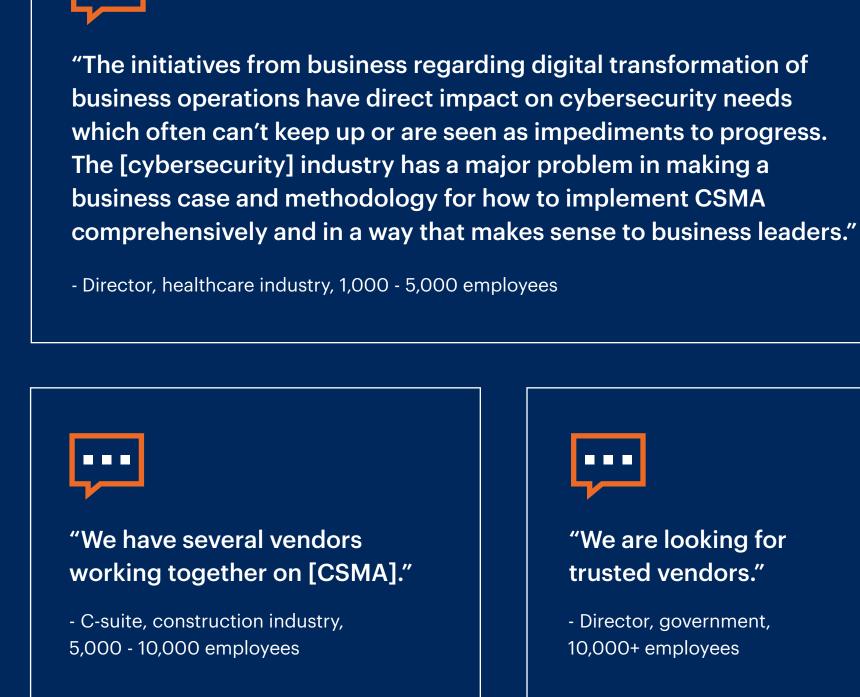

13%

Not sure

No

And almost three-quarters (73%) of

"We are looking for trusted vendors."

- Director, government,

9%

No

10%

10%

stage

16%

stage

45%

team's ability to build CSMA?

2%

Moderately

unconfident

n = 123

n = 123

22%

Neutral

10,000+ employees

managing security tools (41%). What were the reasons your team decided to adopt or is planning to adopt CSMA? Increasing complexity of security threats and attack methods Increasing complexity of 41% managing security tools Slow security enforcement or 31% response decision making Coverage gaps due to 30% siloed solutions Lack of interconnection 16% between point solutions

"Threats may be identified in real-time with the use of CSMA, and assets like data and devices can be better safeguarded than with standard VPN passwords."

72%

Moderately

confident security tools (33%) are major challenges. Which aspects of building CSMA have been most challenging? 38% 34% 33% 15% 31% Purchasing point Consolidating Centralizing Building a Finding products from vendors common composable policy and intelligence and with advanced APIs and/or distributed playbook identify fabric governance and integrations security controls management Consolidating dashboards 11%, Increasing enforcement capabilities 10%,

Half of leaders say the unclear definition of CSMA (51%) as well as a lack of vendors engineering efforts needed to integrate tools (47%) and the absence of tactical best

44%

Lack of tactical best practice guidance

What are the main barriers to CSMA?

Investment risk (i.e., introduction of industry standards may drive up cost of org's proprietary CSMA approach) 36%, Costs 18%,

Lack of executive interest 8%,

None of these 0%, Other 0%

n = 200

offering complete solutions (50%) both represent key hurdles to adoption. The Increasing analytics capabilities 8%, None of these 0%, Other 0%

47%

40%

- C-suite, utilities industry, 10,000+ employees experience)

Major engi-required to neering effort

integrate tools

Skills gaps (i.e., too few professionals with CSMA practices (44%) are also common barriers.

51%

50%

of CSMA

Unclear definition

Lack of vendors

CSMA solutions

offering complete building a common identity fabric (34%) and sourcing composable/distributed

"We don't have enough talent "It's a beast but necessary and knowledge around CSMA, for a growing company and an increased threat so we are thinking about hiring external consultants." landscape." - VP, retail industry,

Want more insights like this from leaders like yourself? Click here to explore the revamped, retooled and reimagined Gartner Peer Insights. You'll get unprecedented access to verified reviews, synthesized insights and engaging discussions from a community of your peers. Respondent Breakdown

- Director, government,

5,000 - 10,000 employees

EMEA 20%

23%

34%

Company Size

23%

21%

<1,001

employees

1,001 - 5,000

employees

1,000 - 5,000 employees

APAC 12%

28% I'm aware of cybersecurity mesh architecture but don't know the technological details n = 200

Organizations adopt CSMA to cope with the increasing complexity of threats, attack methods and security tools 26% Not sure of those who are not yet building CSMA plan to adopt it. Over half of leaders (56%) say they don't have such plans in place but Yes, we're in believe they should. the planning Is your organization planning to adopt CSMA? 56% Yes, we're in the No, but I think development n = 70we should The most reported factor driving CSMA adoption is the increasing complexity of security threats and attack methods (45%), followed by the growing difficulty of Lack of centralized policy management 10%, Inconsistent visibility 9%, Lack of n = 123centralized threat databases 8%, Uncoordinated detection methodology, threat correlation and response 7%, Inability to apply protections based on asset value 5%, Difficulty stopping spyware 4%, None of these 0%, Other 0% Three-quarters (75%) feel confident that their How confident are you in your team is capable of building CSMA.

Not at all confident 0%, Unsure 0%

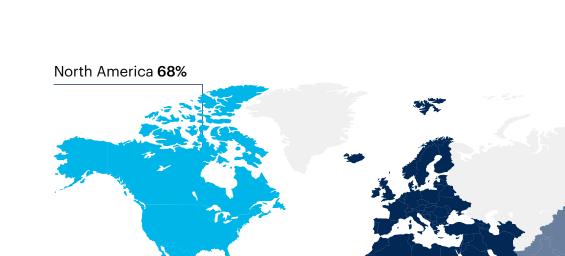

- C-suite, software industry, <1,000 employees

3%

Very confident

"We first need to increase our current skills in order to keep implementing CSMA in the company." - Director, government, 1,000 - 5,000 employees Advanced APIs and integrations present a major challenge to building CSMA 38% report that one of the most difficult aspects of building CSMA is purchasing point solutions with advanced APIs and integrations. About a third also find that "We need to find proper experts."

Job Level

VΡ

40%

C-suite

16%

© 2023 Gartner, Inc. and/or its affiliates. All rights reserved.

Director

44%

neither endorses it nor makes any warranties about its accuracy or completeness.

Source: Gartner Peer Community, Cybersecurity Mesh Architecture survey

Region

This content, which provides opinions and points of view expressed by users, does not represent the views of Gartner; Gartner

10,001+

employees